Subject: St. John Methyl Bromide Response: possibly medically important

Hi Elena:

I received the below email from one of the responding paramedics. It explains some previously missing details of the family's medical condition at the time of discovery at the condominium and while in transit to the hospital. I'm not sure if these are medically important at this point, but they may be, so I have copied the treating doctors at CHOP. If any of this is valuable in the treatment of the father's condition, can one of you also please forward it to his treating physician(s)?

I haven't shared this with Mr. Maron (family friend) yet as I'm not sure it adds value at this time, the details are disturbing, and I wanted to spare him any additional emotional pain if possible. I will likely contact him and ask if he'd like me to share.

Ex. 6 - Personal Privacy also states that the other paramedics continue to suffer headaches. I wasn't sure if you will be following up with them, but maybe you should; your call.

Thanks for your continued help on this.

Cris

Hi!

Thanks for the info. I actually got this info from your friend/co worker Elena. I don't know how much longer you will be on island, but I had a debriefing with the crew that worked with me that night at the Sirenusa call and things that happened on scene were brought to my attention that I wasn't aware of until the meeting. I do feel it's pertinent information as far as symptoms go.

The first piece of info that was brought to my attention, was one of the STJ Rescue volunteers had a conversation with the father and told him that his son Ryan yelled for him cause he could not move and Mr. Esmond had broke the door trying to get into the bedroom. The other piece of information was recalled by my EMS partner of something that occurred on the boat. Mr. Esmond kept getting confused about which child was who. He kept calling Ryan Sean and vice versa. Mrs. Esmond was then asked and corrected her husband as to who was who and he seemed very confused. The last piece that may be relevant also occurred on the boat when I was transporting him back to STT. He told me that his vision was weird. I asked how is it weird, blurry, double? He replied no, but he couldn't really explain it.

I'm waiting on my lab results. From what I read, it may not show anything definitive, but it doesn't necessarily mean that I wasn't exposed nor anyone else on that scene. Both myself and one STJ Rescue member are still having headaches and from talking to him, they are the same type of headaches. By this I mean they just come on suddenly and then dissipate within 10 minutes or so. Sometimes they last longer and some are more annoying than others. I guess you could say they are intermittent headaches. Hopefully it's just stress or anxiety related and they will go away with time.

Anyway, if I can be of any further assistance, please feel free contact me. I'd like to help in any way I can, especially the Esmond family. I cannot even begin to imagine what lies ahead for them. I can only hope and pray they have a full recovery from this incident and that something like this will never happen again to anyone.

All the best,

Ex. 6 - Personal Privacy

Hi Wendy,

I've been having trouble getting to a functional Internet and haven't been able to email documents as promised. I've had someone email this ATSDR document to me so I could forward to you. You may have already found this; please let me know if it helps answer your questions or you need more.

Thanks again for all of your help. You've been awesome!

Cris
